Specification

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Zakim et al in view of Hein et al and Guzelsu et al. Zakim et al discloses using either infrared reflectance spectroscopy or infrared attenuated total reflectance techniques for evaluating tissue. Zakim et al disclose using a probe placed near the tissue sample. The test can be performed either in-vivo or in-vitro. The detected infrared radiation is examined with regard to frequency, intensity or bandwidth and compared to known values to determine the condition of the sample. Zakim et al disclose the use of both near-infrared radiation and mid-infrared radiation. In the absence of any showing of criticality, the specific type of analysis performed on the obtained spectra would have been an obvious design choice of known equivalents in the art. Zakim et al fails to specifically disclose the use of a fiber optic probe and evaluation of connective tissue. Guzelsu et al disclose using a fiber optic probe to optically examine connective tissue. It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art to have modified Zakim et al such that an optical fiber probe is used to examine the connective tissue as taught by Guzelsu et al. Such a modification merely involves the substitution of one known type of probe having a light source for another. Hein et al disclose infrared spectroscopic analysis of connective tissue (see column 8, lines 11-24). It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art to have used the probe of Zakim et al to examine connective tissue as taught by Hein et al and Guzelsu et al in order to allow one to provide a diagnosis of the connective tissue in the patient. It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art that the teachings of Zakim et al would have been applicable to any type of tissue including any type of connective tissue. With respect to claim 11, the use of a probe in combination with ATR would inherently include the use of the structure set forth in the claim.
